

Older people's services publication statement 1 October 2019

The Health Information and Quality Authority (HIQA) has published 29 inspection reports on residential centres for older people. The Chief Inspector has statutory responsibility for independently regulating designated centres for older people for compliance with the Health Act (2007) Regulations and the National Standards for Residential Care Settings for Older People in Ireland (2016), to ensure that the people living in these services are safe and well cared for.

Of the 29 reports published today, inspectors found evidence of good practice and compliance with the regulations and standards in 15 centres. In general, these centres were found to be meeting residents' needs and delivering care in line with the national standards and regulations.

Inspectors found evidence of non-compliance in 14 centres. At the time of inspection in these centres, the provider had failed to ensure that the service delivered to residents was effectively monitored in line with the regulations and standards. Non-compliances were identified in areas including governance and management; residents' rights; premises; personal possessions; fire precautions; individual assessment and care plan; healthcare; infection control; records; written policies and procedures;
